The student owns the intellectual property (IP), unless:

- An assignment that is part of the education involves a company that wishes to obtain the results (IP)
- The student does not agree to the transfer of the IP and asks the Examination Board of his or her degree programme for a replacement assignment
- The student agrees to the transfer of the IP and obtains the same rights to a share in any future profits derived from the IP as a regular employee.

In the case of an internship with a company, the student generally does not share in the profits.
